

TALC: WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT IT

At some point in their lives, almost everyone has used a product containing talc. Caregivers use talcum or body powders while diapering babies to prevent rashes, and many adults use it to absorb moisture from the body and to keep the skin dry and refreshed after showering or bathing.

When talcum or body powder particles containing talc are applied for feminine hygiene purposes, research has suggested the talc may make its way into the fallopian tubes, uterus, and ovaries. According to a study in a recent issue of an epidemiology journal, women who routinely applied talc to their genital areas had a 33 percent higher risk of developing ovarian cancer.

In a 2015 study, the National Cancer Institute confirmed that using a talc product increased the risk of ovarian cancer 30 to 60 percent.

Talc

Talc is mined from the earth. It is composed of magnesium, silicon, oxygen, and hydrogen. In its natural form, talc contains asbestos, which causes cancer.

Johnson & Johnson is the primary manufacturer of talcum powder products in the U.S. Internal documents have revealed the company knew of the link between ovarian cancer and its powder products. A jury found Johnson & Johnson guilty of not warning the public about the risk of women using their powder products in genital areas and getting ovarian cancer.

FDA and Talc

Under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, products for cosmetic purposes and their ingredients do not have to undergo FDA review or approval. The FDA does watch for safety issues and takes action when needed, but before any action can be taken, the FDA needs sound scientific proof that a product is harmful.

The FDA did study several products containing talc. Since the study was hindered by the number of products tested, the FDA could not prove that most or all talc or talc-containing products currently marketed in the U.S. are likely to be free of asbestos contamination.

Do You Need an Attorney?

If you or someone you know used a talc-containing product and developed ovarian cancer, you should consider contacting an attorney.

At Hupy and Abraham, S.C., we pride ourselves on being honest and straightforward with our clients and potential clients. It doesn't benefit anyone to pursue litigation when a case isn't strong.

When manufacturers put an inferior product on the market, they should be held responsible for it. And, if that product was not tested adequately, they should also be held responsible. It's also very important to secure evidence that the manufacturers knew about the product's serious risks, but did not share the information with the public or warn consumers.

The single best way to know if you need an attorney is to speak with one. Share the details of your case, bring any evidence you have, and simply tell your story. A lawyer from Hupy and Abraham, S.C. will respond to your personal story with the sensitivity, concern, and compassion that you are entitled to receive. Our attorneys will examine your possible case, answer your questions, and let you know your legal options.

Getting Compensation for Talc

Why should you file a lawsuit after a talc-containing product was used? A serious diagnosis and medical issue can result in enormous losses, both financial and otherwise. If someone else, such as a manufacturer, is responsible for your health condition, they are also responsible for the costs your health condition incurs.

Specifically, you may be entitled to the following types of damages if you or a member of your family has been harmed by talc:

- Economic damages. These damages include the actual money lost by defective products. Economic damages include medical costs, lost wages, lost future income, and lost earning power.
- Non-economic damages. A serious medical condition caused by a defective product can greatly affect your life, your abilities, and your happiness. A liable manufacturer may owe you compensation for any pain and suffering, mental anguish, permanent disabilities, loss of companionship, loss of consortium, or lowered quality of life.
- Punitive damages. If a company has been grossly negligent or if it is determined that the company has committed an egregious wrong, they may be asked to pay their victims more money as a punishment and as a deterrent. The amount received for punitive damages varies widely.

In short, damages are meant to accomplish two major goals: compensate the victims and their families for what they have lost and prevent similar incidents from happening in the future. By filing a lawsuit, you are not only making sure that you receive what you are lawfully owed, you are also making sure that others don't suffer in the way that you have.

What Should You Do If You Have Been Harmed by Talc?

When you suffer an injury in a traffic accident that is someone else's fault, the steps you take to get better and pursue compensation are relatively straightforward. If you believe that you have been harmed by a potentially defective product, the path to justice can be much less clear.

While all harmful products are different, there are a few things that everyone should do if they believe they are the victim of a harmful product:

- Get the medical assistance that you need. Nothing is more important than your health. If you believe a product is causing you health problems, illnesses, or adverse events, you should report your symptoms to a medical professional immediately and voice your concern that your health condition may be tied to that product. Not only will getting medical assistance considerably improve your chances of recovery and remission, it will also document your health issues in the event that you would like to file a lawsuit.
- Don't hesitate to get a second opinion. We can't state this enough: Your health is the most precious thing you have. If your doctor isn't convinced that the product is affecting your health, or if your doctor isn't taking your health concerns seriously, seek a second opinion.
- Be compliant. It is difficult to get compensation for illnesses and medical costs if you don't follow treatment plans and doctors' orders. It's also difficult to get well if you aren't listening to your treating medical professionals.
- Keep notes and records. Take notes when you visit the doctor. Get copies of your medical records. Keep a diary of symptoms, illnesses, and health observations. Keep track of medical expenses and other monetary losses related to your harmful product. All of the information you collect could be important to your possible lawsuit.
- Talk to an attorney—or two—about your case. Far too many harmful product victims second-guess themselves or delay telling their stories. They do not realize that many medical attorneys offer free, private consultations, or that a knowledgeable lawyer can analyze the evidence in their case and explain their legal options.

Hiring An Attorney? Ten Questions to Ask During Your Consultation

Even if you have decided that you want to learn more about your possible case, it can be difficult to know who to turn to, who to trust, and who will be your optimal partner and advocate. It is important to understand that not all attorneys have specific experience with regard to products like talc. In addition, it is important to understand that different attorneys offer different experiences—and at different costs. Below, we've listed ten questions you should ask potential lawyers before agreeing to work with them on your case.

1. Do you have experience handling defective product cases, especially products like talc?
2. How do you conduct medical research related to cases like mine?
3. Do you utilize medical experts? If so, what are their credentials?
4. What do you believe are the most important aspects of a defective product lawsuit?
5. Can you share past defective product case results with me?
6. What are the strengths and weaknesses of my case?
7. What are my legal rights and what are my options for action?
8. Who in your office will handle my case? How will I contact you during my case?
9. What are your feelings on settling as opposed to going to court?
10. How do you bill your clients? What can I expect to pay if I win? What can I expect to pay if I lose?

Don't forget: It's not just experience and expertise that matter. In some cases, a lawyer's personality simply won't complement yours or you may simply not work well with certain attorneys. If you don't feel comfortable with the attorney you are speaking with, or if you don't feel confident about partnering with him or her, consider talking to someone else before making your decision.
